Governance of Physician Organizations

The American Hospital Association's

Presented following the conclusion of the Health Forum/AHA Leadership Summit, July 23-25, 2015, San Francisco Marriott Marquis.

The transformation of health care toward more integrated and accountable delivery systems has brought physicians and hospitals together as collaborators in ever increasing numbers. With this shift has come a need to rethink and engage physician leaders in new roles, including governance.

To understand how the governance of physician-led organizations is different, and similar, to that of health care systems, the AHA's Center for Healthcare Governance and Physician Leadership Forum, with generous support from Hospira, Inc., undertook a study to examine governance structures and functions in a diverse set of physician organizations—entities designed to engage physicians in the leadership, governance and decision-making of the clinical care enterprise. The study is among the first to explore this work from the perspective of physicians, including the issues and challenges they face in the evolution of physician involvement in governance and leadership. Join us in San Francisco to hear the highlights of the study, including case study presentations from physician leaders in three leading-edge physician organizations.

The program is structured to encourage networking and exchange of ideas among participants.

This session is brought to you through collaboration between the American Hospital Association's (AHA) Physician Leadership Forum and the Center for Healthcare Governance.
